

In this paper, to enhance the generalization capability of object detectors, we introduce a novel efficient attention module. Additionally, to improve the model's feature extraction capability, we design a new local feature extraction module. Based on these innovations, we construct a new backbone network that can be seamlessly integrated into the YOLO series detectors.